Always Check Your Rams Pre-Tupping To Assess Their Potential Reproduction Performance

Do you trust your clinical skills to detect subtle changes linked to reduced fertility in your rams pre-tupping? Yet, you are certainly aware of the catastrophic consequences of using sub-fertile rams.

We can help by carrying out a detailed clinical examination, general and specific for the reproductive tract, and advise on the suitability of males for the upcoming reproductive season. Where necessary, we can collect and examine a semen sample on farm, adding valuable information to the assessment.

We can carry out the clinical exam proficiently in a limited amount of time for each ram, resulting in excellent value for money.

We recommend that the initial assessment is carried out approximately two months prior to the start of the mating season, to allow for possible corrective measures to be taken if an animal fails the testing.
